only one Sealyham in the show ring Mrs. Willets is confident that she will carry off some of the chief honers.

At her city home, in West Eleventh Street, yesterday, Mrs. Willets taiked of her handsome little Sealyhams and introduced the visitor to Fickle Mary, her latest importation from abroad.

Fickle Mary was brought over from England a few days ago by George S. Thomas, the Sealyham authority, and sold by him to Mrs. Willets, Molly, Mrs. Willets's home name for the little stranger, is eighteen months old, and is the last word in the new type of Sealyham, low to the ground, with clean ham—low to the ground, with clean

As becomes a champion in any line of endeavor, Lone Star affected a most blase air while Mrs. Willets recounted his string of victories and sedately chewed on an apple he had resurrected from the kitchen. Immense cups and bowls of gold and silver stood about on mantelpieces and tables, more evidence of his past triumphs. "You see," said Mrs. Willets, looking wistfully at Lone Star, "this dog is longer in the legs than Molly, and his lead is not so sharply defined. For myself, I much prefer the old type. Sealyhems are great field dogs, so why which Mrs. Peter Cedar as the judge in all regular classes. Cocker spaniels, according to "Field and Fancy," and are the only two real blue dogs known in the world.

About a year ago one of Doc's Cocker bitches became the mother of a blue puppy bitch. Holdenby called in James Watson, who is generally credited with knowing the inside history and ante-cedents of the dog on Noah's ark, and Mr. Watson declared it was the first blue Cocker on record.

A few days ago snother litter of puppies arrived in the Holdenby kennels, in which there was another blue puppy, this time a dog. Doc is being flooded with advice from friends, some of whom suggest that he feed the two blues on indigo and produce a litter of azure pups.

With Pride Every Time They

Win a Prize.

Did you ever stop to think, dog fancier, that perhaps your winning dog takes a justifiable pride in being awarded cups and blue ribbons? Grown men have been seen to swell with conscious greatness when they won a cup at golf, athletics or lawn tennis. Why, then, should not the dog be proud of his victories?

Mrs. D. D. Dunn, who wrote the following verses, printed in a recent issue of "Field and Fancy," evidently helieves dogs thrill with pride every time the judge awards them a cup. Hear ye:

Containing the names of every entrant, may be printed and distributed among the twenty-nine colleges and universities holding membership in the association.
